Keynote speaker

Dr John Mandrola MD, FACC
Baptist Health, Louisville, Kentucky, USA

Dr Mandrola is board-certified in cardiovascular disease, internal medicine, and cardiac electrophysiology and is a fellow of the American College of Cardiology.

He writes a regular column at theHeart.org, maintains a general health and fitness blog (Dr. John M) and is active on social media, especially Twitter, where he can be found @DrJohnM. His work has also appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association-Internal Medicine, Atlantic.com and the Louisville Courier-Journal.

A graduate of the University of Connecticut School of Medicine, Dr. Mandrola completed his residency at Indiana University and completed fellowships in cardiology and electrophysiology at the Krannert Institute of Cardiology at the IU School of Medicine. He received the Charles Kenner Award for Outstanding Fellow from the IU Department of Medicine in 1996.

Since 1996, Dr. Mandrola has gained substantial experience in cardiac device implantation and management, and cardiac ablation, particularly atrial fibrillation ablation techniques. He has been a lecturer for the Krannert Institute and director of the Arrhythmia Clinic at Richard Roudebush VA Medical Center in Indianapolis.

He has presented original research and been an invited speaker at major medical meetings. His topics include atrial fibrillation, sports cardiology, end-of-life care, social media for doctors, and medical decision-making.

Dr Mandrola's views are strongly shaped by his spouse, Staci Mandrola, MD, who is a practicing hospice and palliative care doctor. He has written often about the care of patients with serious disease and has been an outspoken advocate for patient-centred compassionate care.
